

I. Gaze

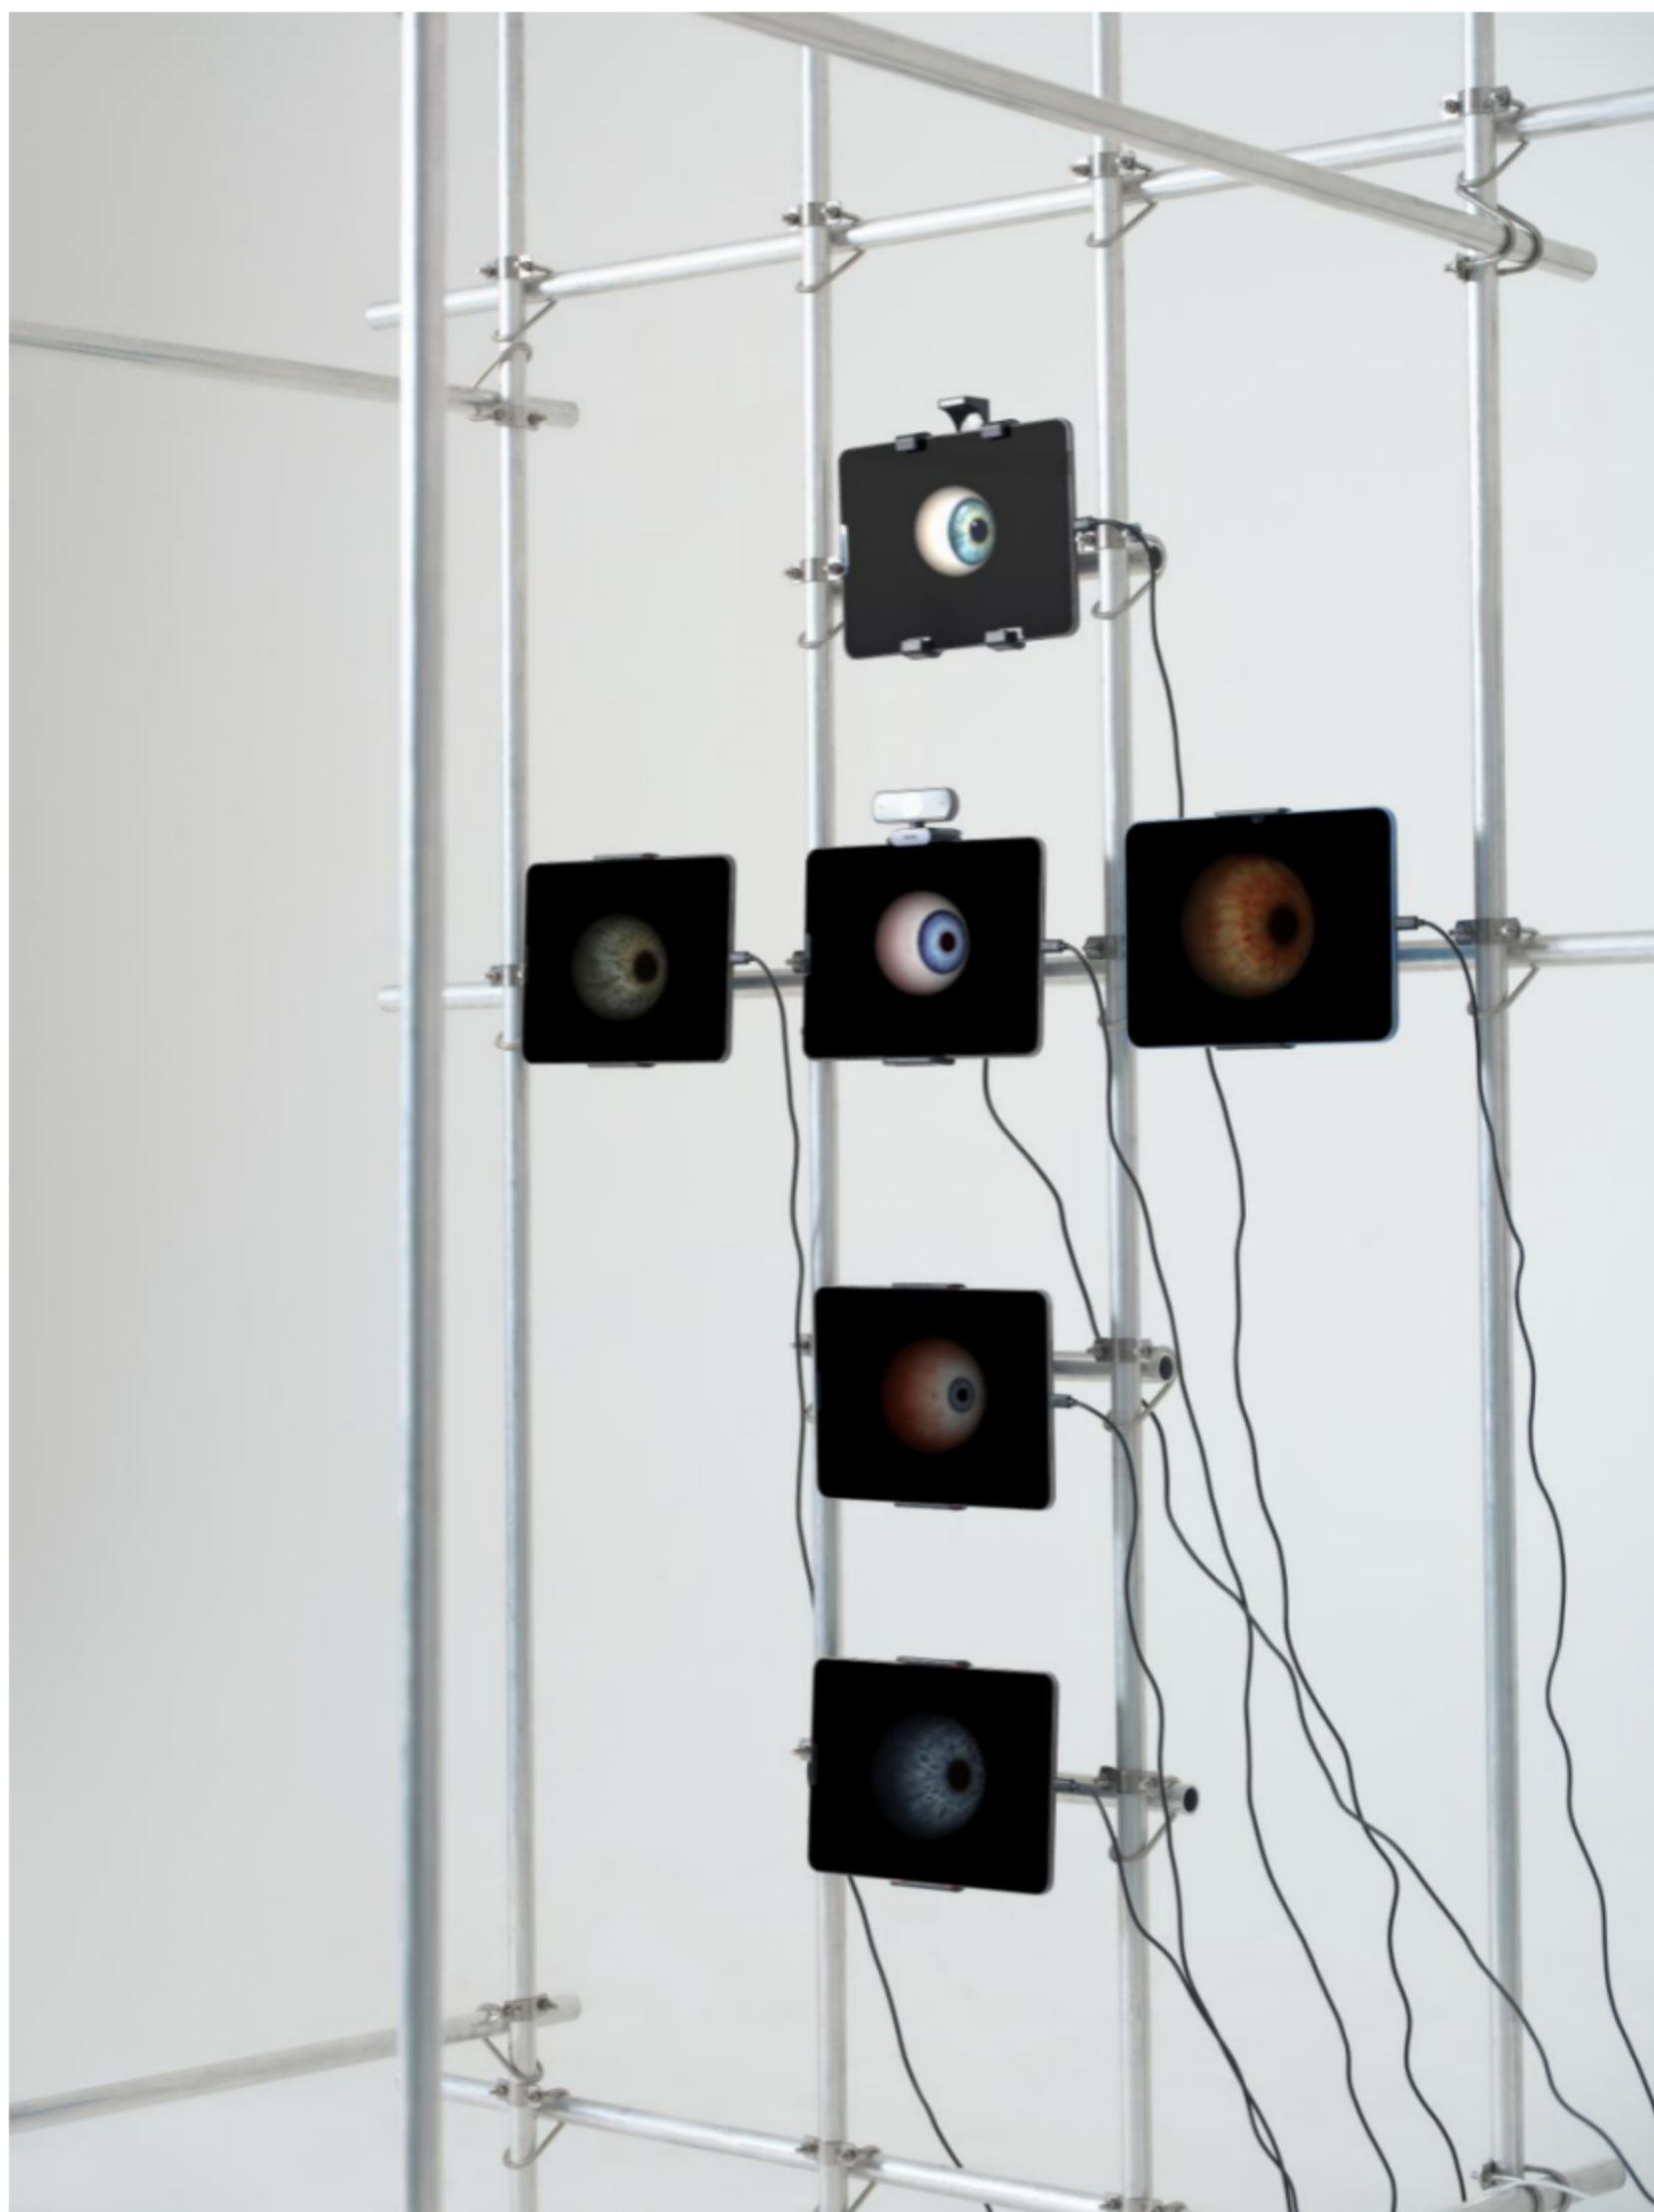

In this era of surging information and an all-encompassing internet, we seem to be surrounded by invisible gazes at every moment. Big data monitoring watches silently from behind, as if every move we make is under someone's observation. We have grown accustomed to living in this digital world, yet unconsciously we are also influenced by the gaze of others.

Meanwhile, I have noticed a phenomenon known as social gaze anxiety. Individuals with this timid symptom experience intense fear toward eye contact; they struggle to control their gaze and prefer not to become the center of attention. Gaze is not only a reminder but also an invitation to awaken—are we too concerned with external eyes, to the point of feeling anxious and overwhelmed? And at the same time, are we also quietly and unconsciously gazing at others?

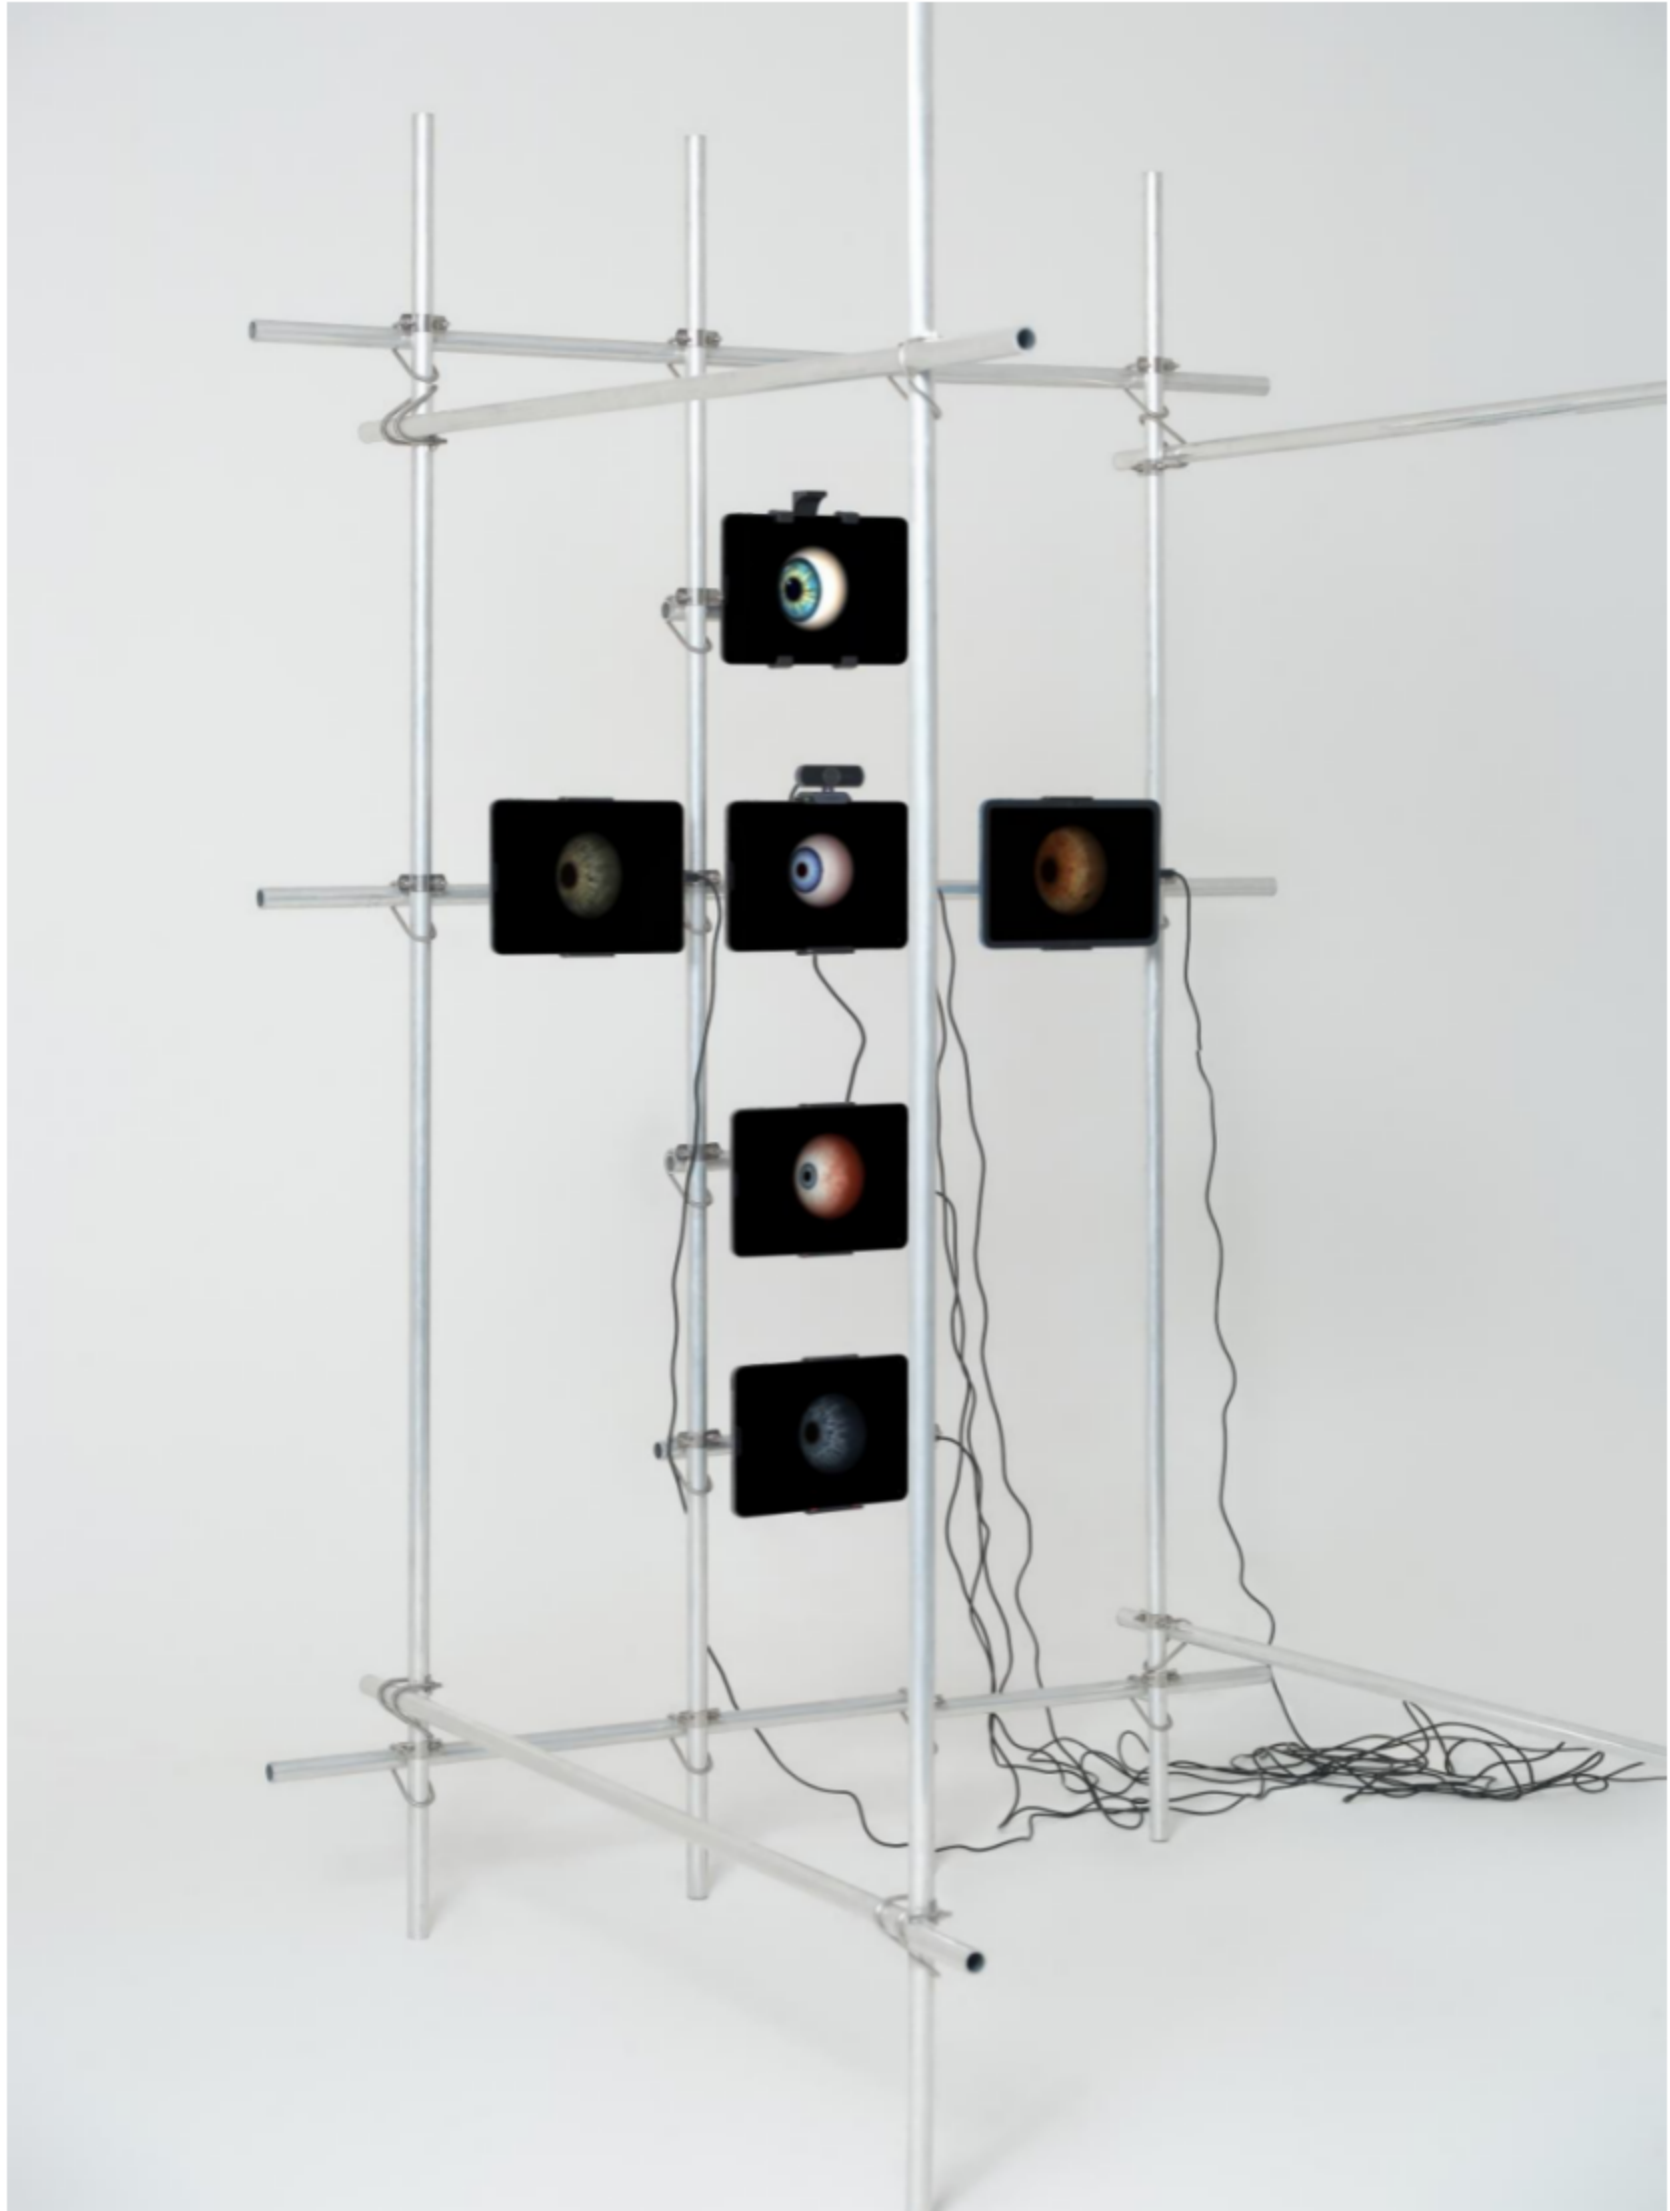

Gaze is a call for individuals to reposition themselves in an information-driven age, and an exploration of breaking free from the gaze of others to view the world with an independent eye.

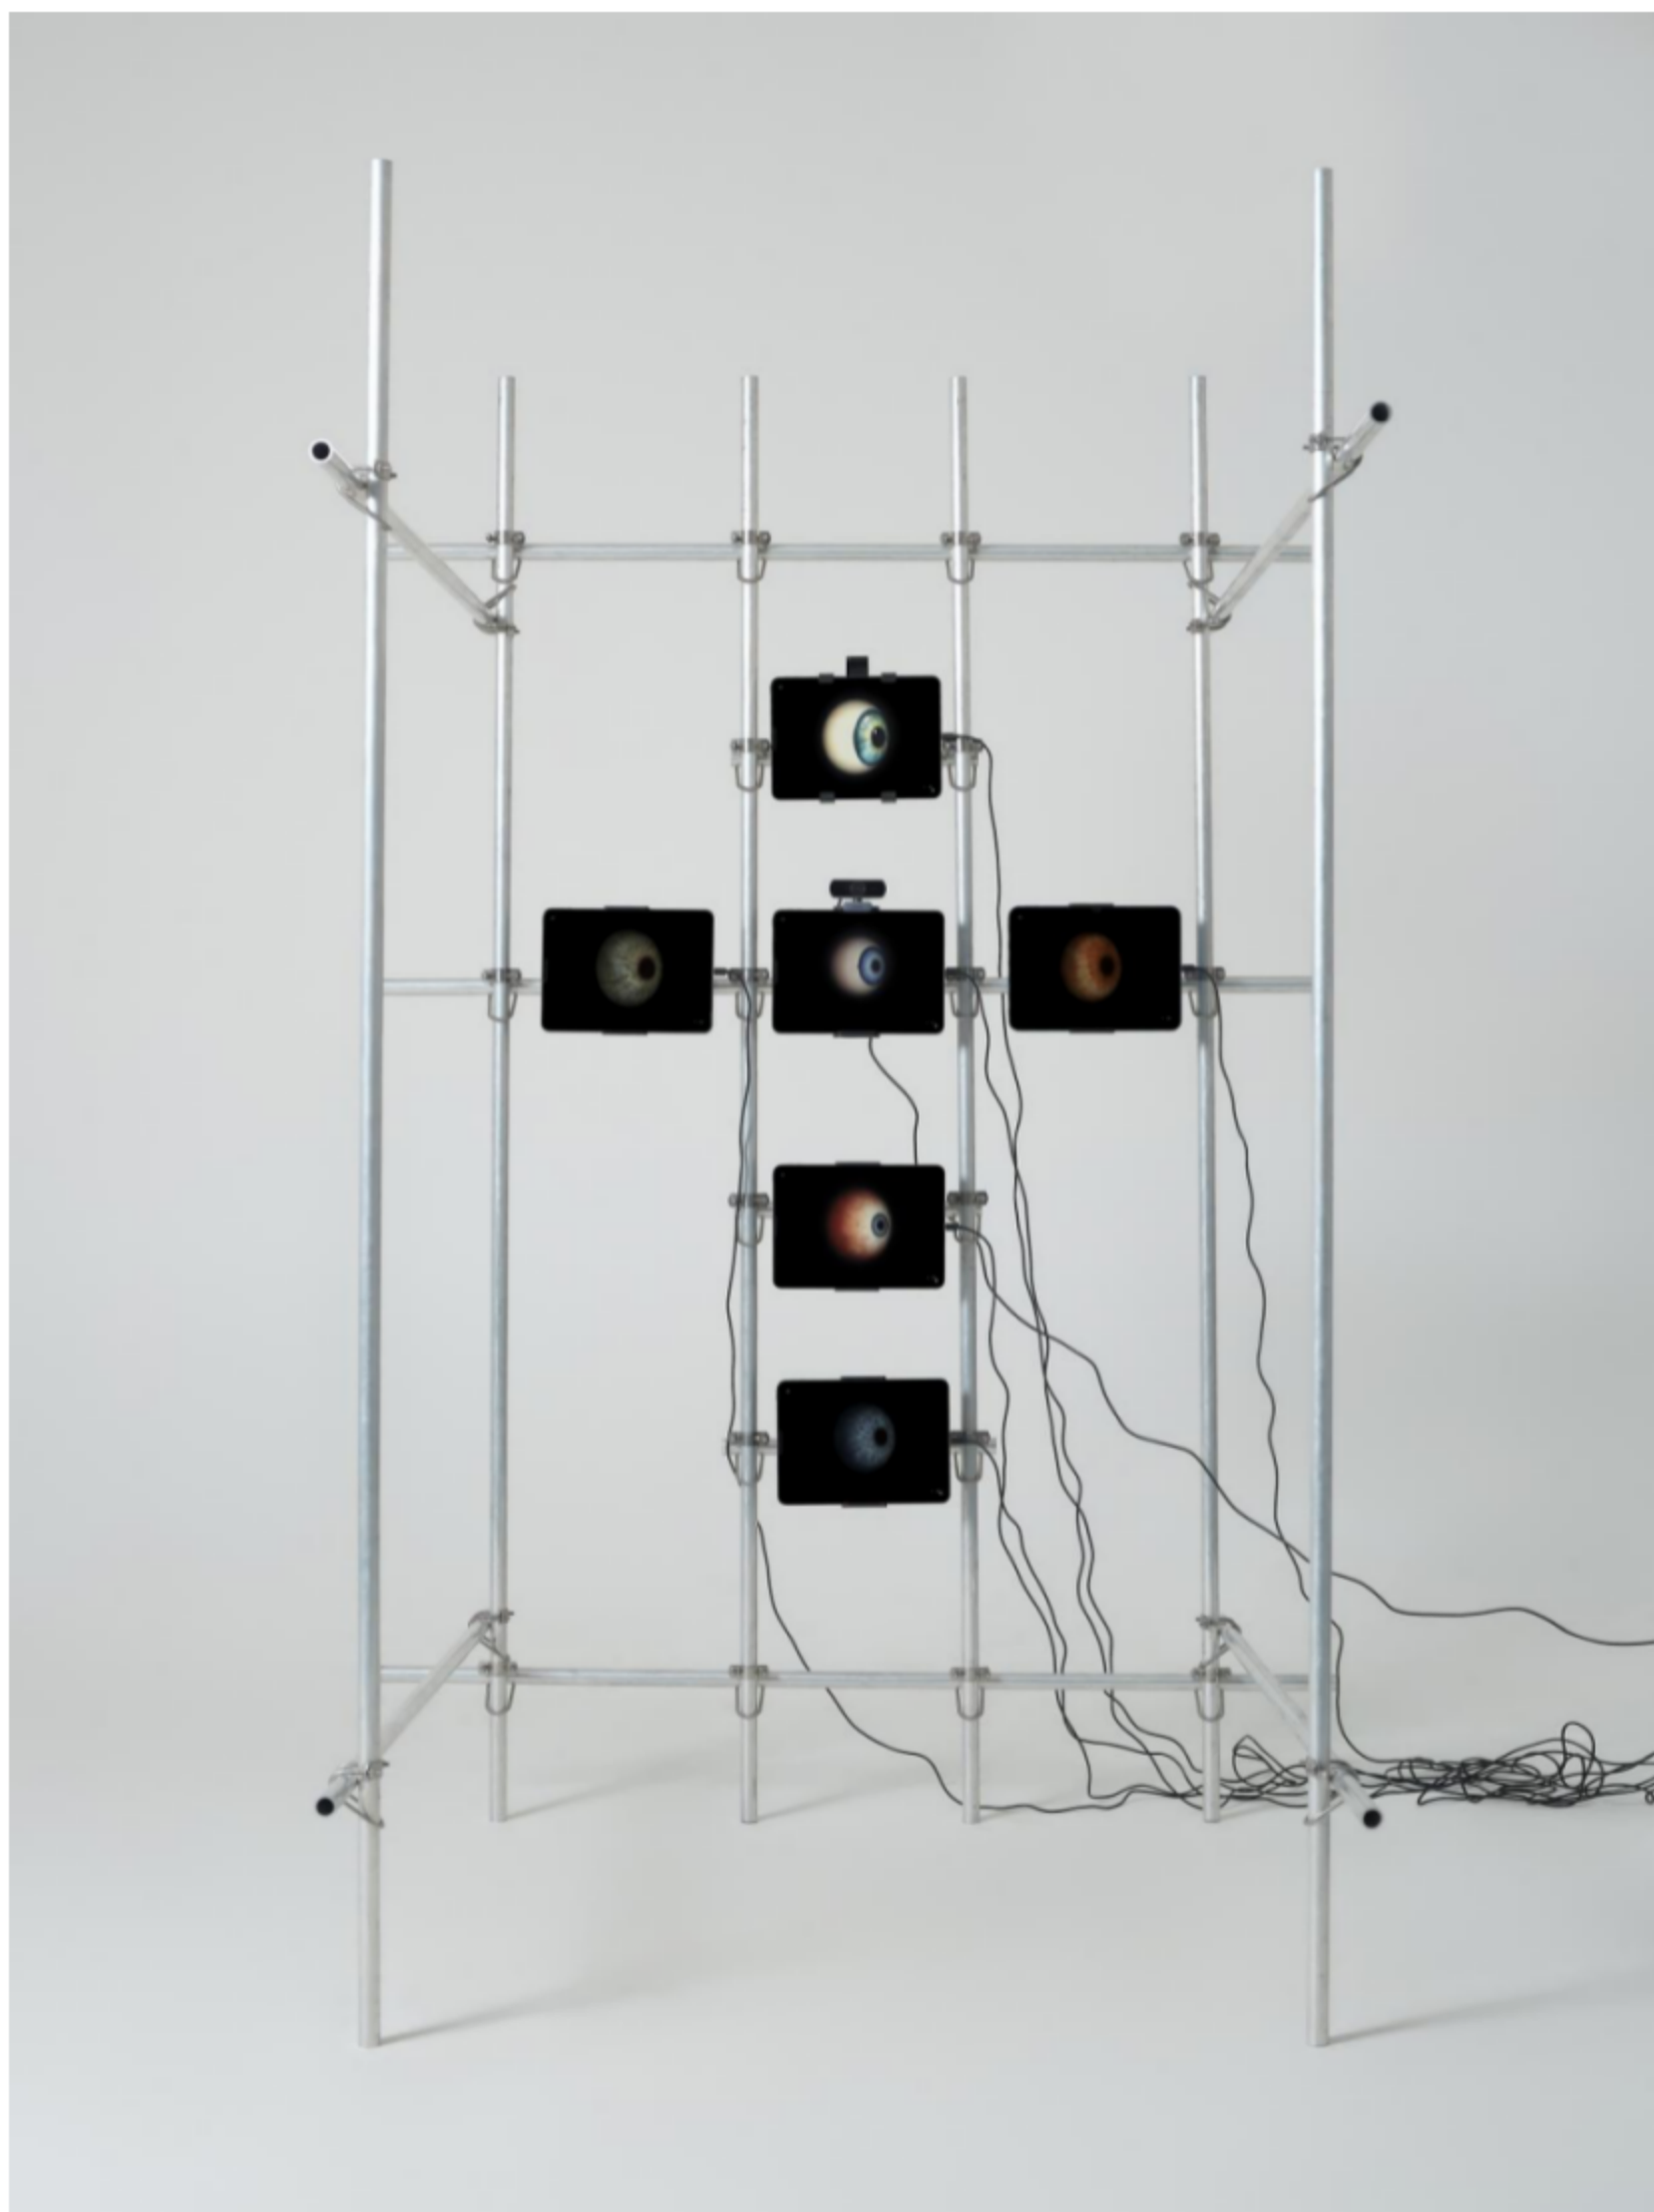

II. Metamorphosis

1. Design Concept

The inspiration for Metamorphosis originates from the growth processes of plants and organisms in nature, with a particular focus on twisting, distortion, renewal, and transformation. The work expresses the endless vitality of life through forms of twisting and evolution, emphasizing the wonders of nature. By infusing natural genes and applying subjective artistic treatment, the work grants new forms to natural life, presenting the artist's unique interpretation of biological evolution.

2. Design Basis

The creative source lies in observing the diverse growth patterns of nature. Through examining plants and organisms that twist, distort, and constantly renew, the artist extracts the fundamental inspiration. Brightly colored stainless-steel materials are selected to reflect the vibrant colors of nature under sunlight, enhancing the work's attraction and vitality.

3. Color Method

The design emphasizes conveying vitality and diversity by choosing rich, vivid colors such as sunshine yellow, sky blue, and fresh green, highlighting life's energetic and uplifting emotions. When illuminated by sunlight, these colors reveal strong luster and visual impact. The use of contrasting colors further enhances visual emphasis and draws attention to specific parts, making the entire composition more dynamic and engaging.

4. Color Characteristics

Bright metallic colors display rich hues under sunlight. Through reflection and refraction, they produce shifting light and shadow effects. The color choices aim to evoke positive emotions, guiding viewers to sense the liveliness and joy of life. This diversity further emphasizes biodiversity and enriches the visual layers of the artwork.

5. Additional Notes

Metamorphosis integrates natural forms with metal materials through artistic expression, highlighting reverence for the power of life and the pursuit of natural beauty. Its geometric structure and metallic texture inject a sense of modernity into urban spaces, allowing viewers to experience the presence of nature even in metropolitan environments. Through this contrast, the work becomes not only an artwork but also a reflection on life, nature, and contemporary society.

III. You and Me

Love is an eternal theme. The coexistence of intimacy and solitude in the sculpture conveys a more powerful inner tension and a more complex emotional relationship. The sculpture is presented in an abstract form, representing two subjects: “You” and “Me.” The space between the figure’s knees symbolizes a place of nurturing, while the tilted head suggests protective care. The form draws from Eastern linear aesthetics, simplifying complexity into clarity.

This sculpture aims to express the importance of rural revitalization, calling attention to its development through artistic language. The two abstract subjects symbolize the individual and the collective.

The intertwining forms of “You” and “Me” imply that in the journey of rural revitalization, no individual stands alone—each person is part of a collaborative effort. The form echoes the concepts of cooperation, solidarity, and shared success, exploring partnership in rural revitalization through a sculptural language.

The sculpture’s use of Eastern linear forms merges modernity with tradition, representing the coexistence of contemporary perspectives and cultural heritage—an important aspect of rural revitalization.

The surrounding environment may incorporate flowerbeds or small landscape features, creating a pleasant atmosphere that reinforces the vision and hope for rural development.

Through this work, I hope to inspire reflection on rural revitalization and evoke collective resonance, encouraging people to contribute to sustainable development.

1. Design Concept

The sculpture You and Me explores the eternal theme of love. Through golden stainless steel and abstract forms, it expresses the coexistence of intimacy and solitude and the complex emotional layers within close relationships. The sculpture creates an atmosphere of tension and depth, guiding viewers to contemplate the multifaceted nature of love.

2. Design Basis

The sculptural form draws inspiration from Eastern linear aesthetics. Complex emotions are expressed through simplified lines and abstract gestures. The two intertwining figures represent “You” and “Me”; the area between the knees symbolizes creation and nurturing, while the tilted head suggests gentle care. The composition conveys profound emotional experience through form and posture.

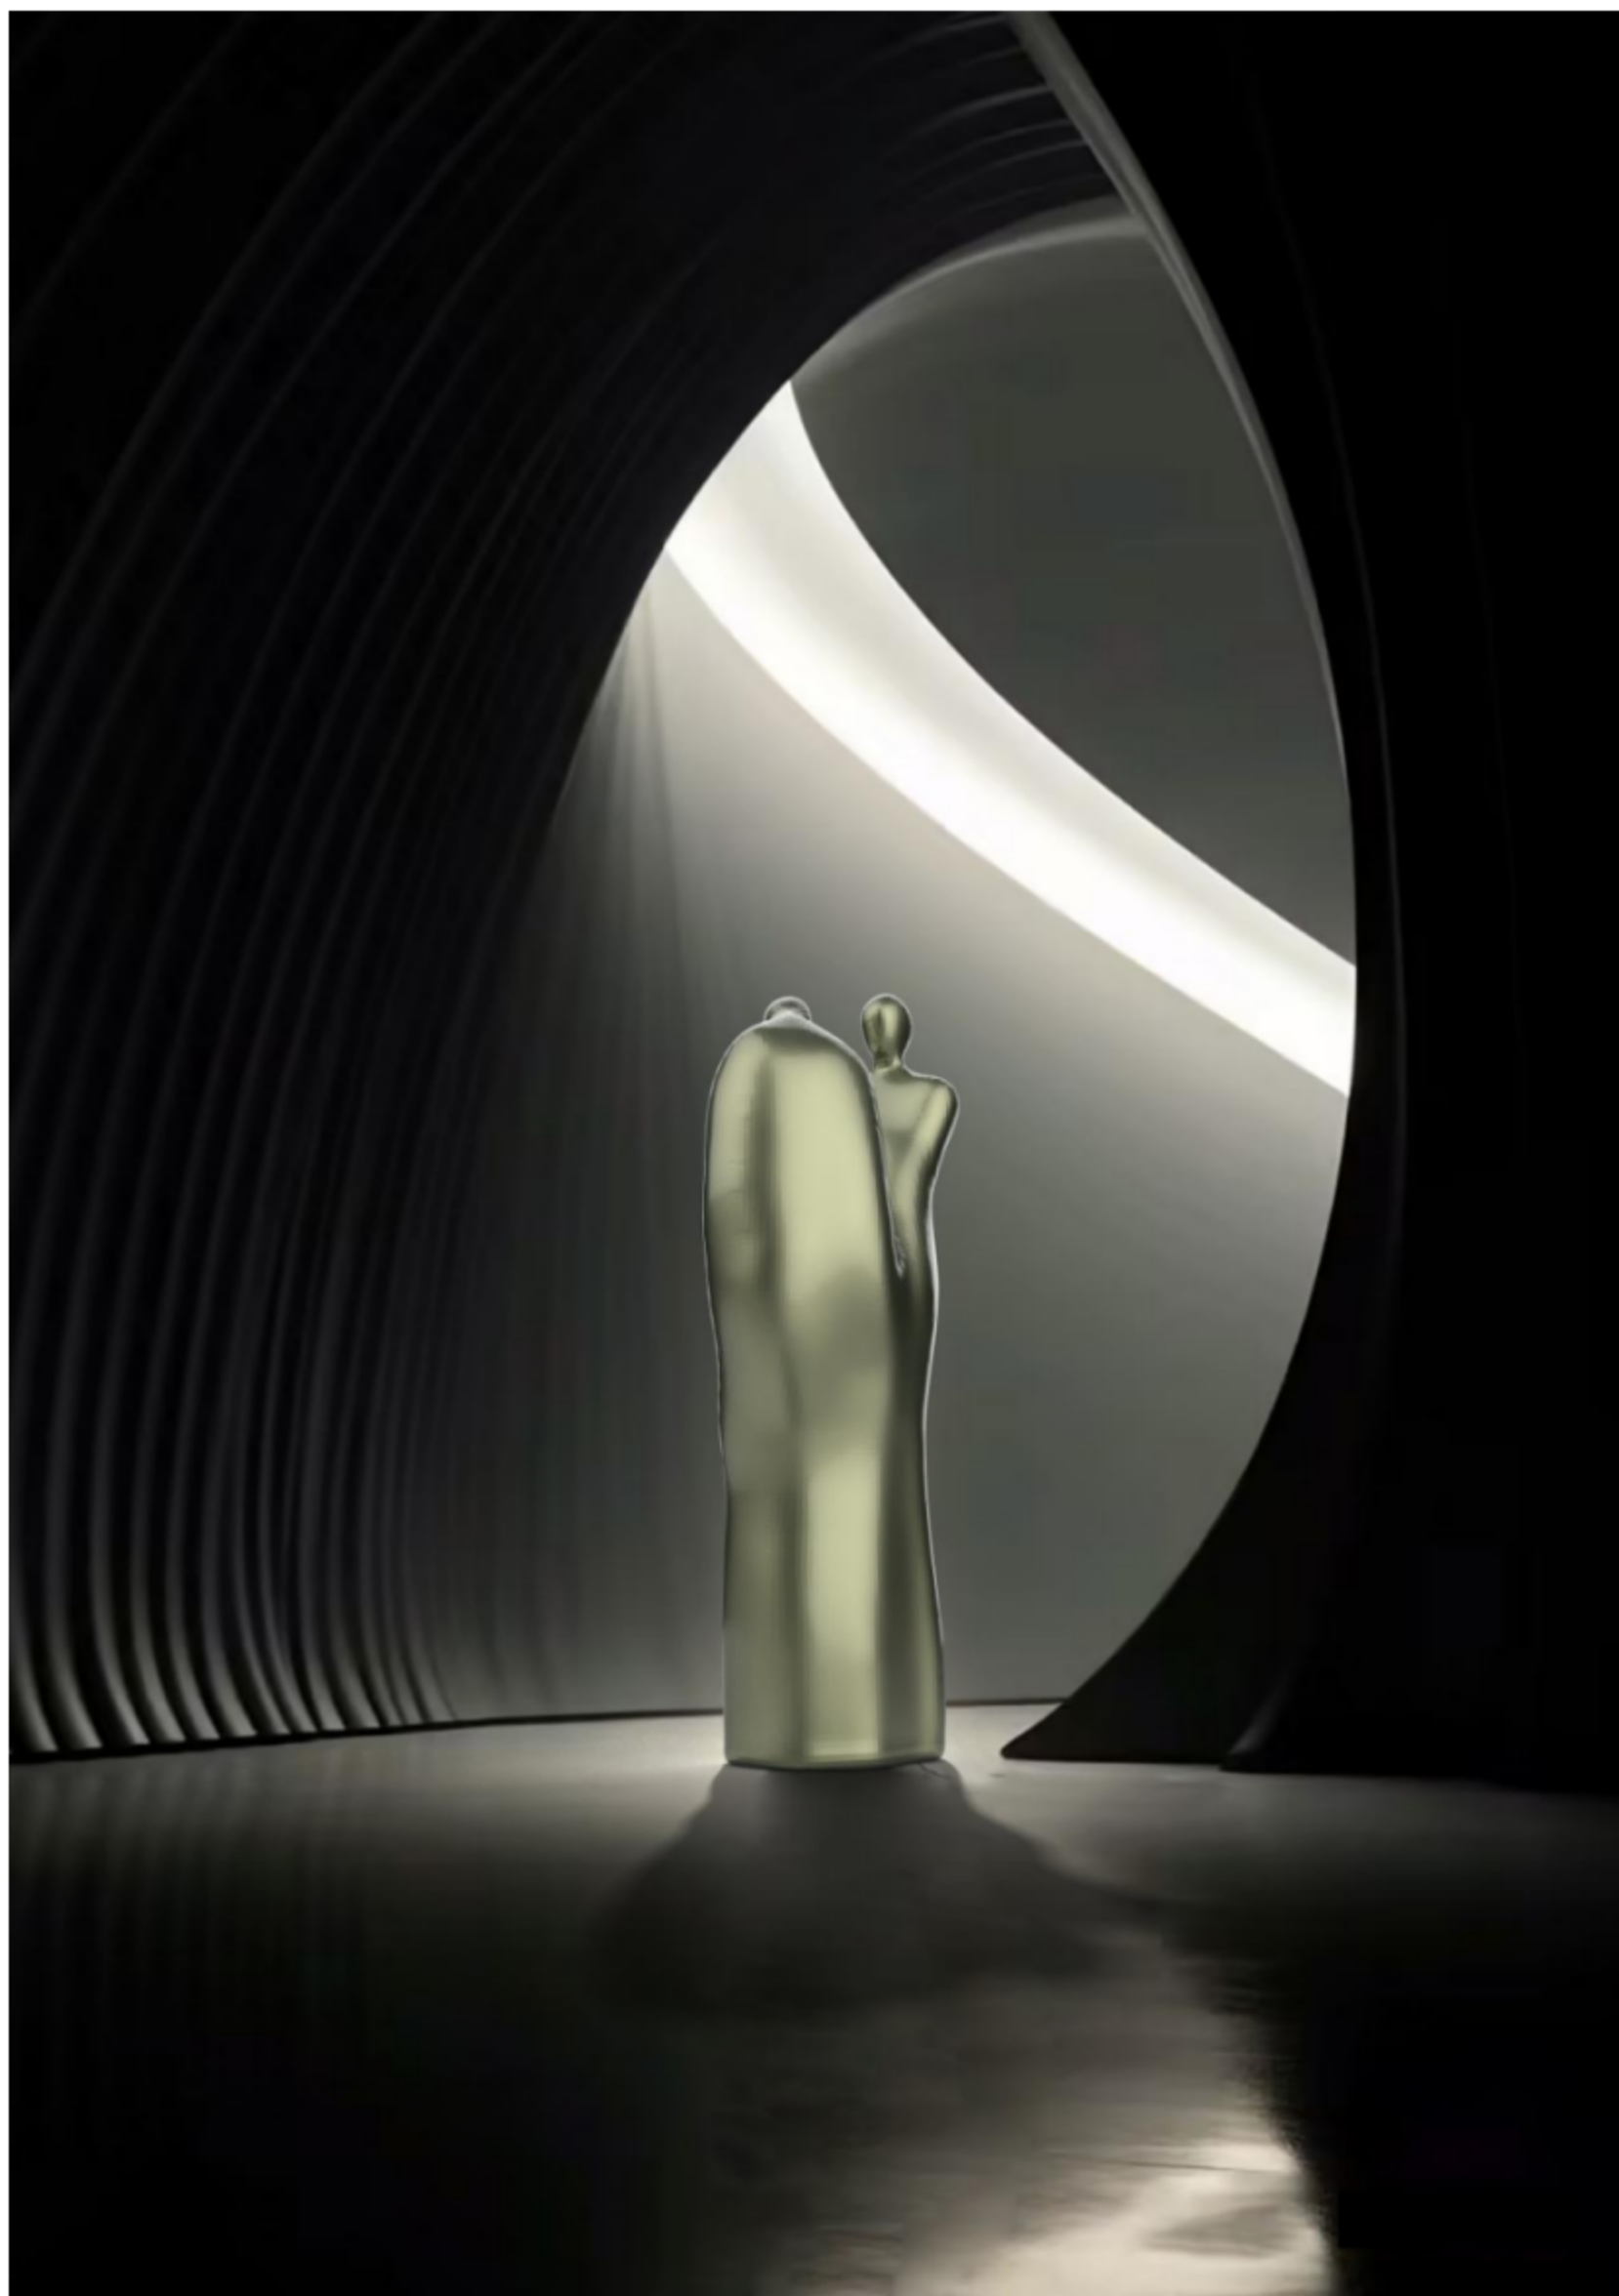

3. Color Method

Golden stainless steel is used as the primary material, creating rich light and shadow effects through its reflective properties. Gold symbolizes warmth, value, and emotional richness, resonating with the theme of love. The approach emphasizes the interplay between surface reflections and lighting conditions, giving the sculpture a shifting texture in various environments.

4. Color Characteristics

The golden tone brings both sophistication and warmth. Combined with linear forms, it creates a minimalist yet layered visual effect. Under changing light, the metal reflects dynamic shadows and highlights, emphasizing the complexity and multi-dimensionality of emotion.

IV. Cloud Realm

I follow the clouds with my gaze, my soul wandering in the sky. Suddenly, an inexplicable confidence arises. I feel that these clouds are the truly eternal beings of the world. Even if they transform into rain and fall to the earth, they will be reborn again—calm, unhurried, never chaotic, never scattered.
